EUGENE ONEGIN

Graham Vick's acclaimed production of Eugene Onegin sets Pushkin's tale of doomed love, tragedy and rejection against an acutely observed backdrop of Russian society, with spectacular choruses and dances. Tchaikovsky's powerful music vividly conveys the passion and despair of the young Tatyana as she declares her love for Onegin. This special, archive recording took place in the first season at Glyndebourne's new opera house in 1994.

"Onegin received precisely the kind of staging and performance that makes Glyndebourne's worldwide reputation." The New York Times
